How charming is DIVINE PHILOSOPHY !
Not harsh, and crabbed, as dull Fools suppose,
But musical as is Apollo's lute,
And a perpetual feast of nectar'd sweets,
Where no crude surfeit reigns. MILTON.

CONTENTS.

INTRODUCTION.— Author's Apology; Design of the Work - - - - -	page i—iv
--	-----------

CHAP. I. page 5.

Inadequate Conceptions of the Importance of Christianity.

THE popular notions concerning the importance of Christianity extremely inadequate - - - - -	5 to 10
Religious ignorance criminal - - - - -	10
Unreasonable to expect to become proficient in Christianity without inquiry and pains - - - - -	11
Scripture representations of the importance of Christianity,	12
The maxim, that it is of no importance what a man believes, exposed - - - - -	14
Also the maxim, that sincerity is all in all - - - - -	15
True sincerity, what included in it - - - - -	18
Concluding reflections - - - - -	ibid.

CHAP. II. p. 19.

Corruption of Human Nature.

SECT. I.— Inadequate Conceptions of the Corruption of Human Nature - - - - -	19
Popular notions concerning Human Corruption - - - - -	ibid.

The different lessons on this subject, which Christianity teaches, proved by the contrast between what we might expect from man, and what we find him in practice	- 21
First, in the most polished nations of antiquity	- - 23
Next, in the inhabitants of the New World on its first discovery	- - - - - 24
Next, in the general state of the Christian world	- - 25
Lastly, even among true Christians	- - - - 28
The Argument summed up and enforced	- - - 29
The Scripture representation of Human Corruption	- 32

SECT. II.— Evil Spirit.—Natural State of Man	- - 33
Existence and agency of the Evil Spirit, though plainly taught in Scripture, generally exploded	- - 34
Nothing unreasonable in this doctrine	- - - ibid.
Scripture representations of the Supreme Being calculated to inspire awe	- - - - - 36
The same awful impressions excited by the divine threatenings and punishments recorded in Scripture, and by the moral order of the world	- - - - 37
Christianity breaks in	- - - - 39
Practical importance and uses of the doctrine of Human Corruption	- - - - - ibid.
Practical advice in relation to this subject	- - - 40

SECT. III.— Corruption of Human Nature.—Objection	- 42
The objection, that our corruption and weakness being natural to us, will be excused or allowed for, stated and considered	- - - - - ibid.
The objection how best treated	- - - - 43
Fallacy of this objection proved by Scripture	- - 45
Danger of admitting the above objection	- - - 46
Humility becomes man	- - - - 47
Folly of busying ourselves with what is above our comprehension, and neglect what is plain and practical	- 48

CHAP. III. p. 50.

Chief Defects of the Religious System of the Bulk of professed Christians, in what regards our Lord Jesus Christ, and the Holy Spirit—with a Dissertation concerning the Use of the Passions in Religion.

SECT. I.—Inadequate Conceptions concerning our Saviour and the Holy Spirit - - - - - 50

Leading doctrines concerning Christ and the Holy Spirit, as stated in Scripture - - - - - ibid.

Inadequate conceptions in the above respects charged on the bulk of professed Christians, and enforced - - - 52

Great ingratitude hereby evinced - - - - - 55

Inadequate notions concerning the Holy Spirit - - - 57

Language of one who objects against the religious affections towards our Saviour - - - - - ibid.

And against the Holy Spirit's operations - - - - - 58

Reply to the above; unreasonableness of arguing from the abuse of a thing against its use - - - - - 60

Religious vulgarity, not to be too much disgusted by it - 63

SECT. II.—On the Admission of the Passions into Religion, 65

The opinion, that the Affections are misplaced in Religion, discussed and refuted - - - - - 65-78

By the reason of the thing - - - - - 66

By the nature of man - - - - - ibid.

By the authority of the Scriptures and of Scripture characters - - - - - 68

True test and measure of the religious affections - - - 70

Religious affections, different according to natural temper, &c. - - - - - 73

The affections not merely allowable in religion, but highly necessary, proved by analogy - - - - - 74

Christ the just object of our warm affections - - - - - 78

The objection, that we are not susceptible of affections towards an invisible Being, discussed - - - -	79
Close contact between subject and object, necessary to produce affection - - - - -	82
And sufficient to produce affection without sight -	83
This explains why public misfortunes affect us less than private or personal - - - - -	85
Means of strengthening our affection towards any object - - - - -	86
Special grounds for the affections towards our Saviour -	87
Divine help-promised for producing religious affections -	88
Unreasonable conduct of objectors in this instance -	89
Appeal to facts, in proof of the reality of the religious affections.—The martyrs of our own church, and the Apostles - - - - -	90

SECT. III.— Inadequate Conceptions concerning the Holy Spirit's Operations - - - -	91
Scripture doctrine concerning the Holy Spirit's Operations,	92

SECT. IV.— Mistaken Conceptions entertained by nominal Christians of the terms of acceptance with God - - - - -	93
Inference afforded by the inadequate conceptions already noted, that mistaken conceptions commonly entertained of the means of a sinner's acceptance with God - - -	94
Different degrees of error - - - - -	95
Nature and proofs of this error - - - - -	96
Their fundamental misconception of the scheme and essential principle of the Gospel - - - - -	98
Practical consequences and confirmation of the above misconception - - - - -	99
Condemnation of those who abuse the doctrine of grace,	102
Believing in Christ, what really implied in it - -	103
Answer to objection, that we insist on metaphysical niceties - - - - -	ibid.

The atonement and grace of Christ farther pressed, as the subjects of our habitual regard - - - -	104
Advantage justly taken by the Socinian, of the above defects - - - - -	106
Practical application and address - - -	109-111

CHAP. IV. p. 112.

On the prevailing inadequate Conceptions concerning the Nature and the Strictness of Practical Christianity.

SECT. I. p. 112.

Inadequate conceptions of the practical strictness required by Christianity, generally prevalent - -	112-114
Strong presumption against their notions - -	115
Practical strictness of Christianity, as stated in Scripture,	116
Essential practical characteristic of true Christians -	118
Excellence of this principle - - - - -	119
The principle farther opened, and shewn to include the love of God - - - - -	121
The above principle of general application proved by the general terms of Scripture precepts - - -	123
Because resulting from relations common to all Christians, ibid.
Proof, from the strong practical precepts of Scripture,	124
From God's requiring the heart - - - - -	125
From the glory of God being prescribed to us as our great object, and from the criminality of idolatry -	126
Extreme importance of the above considerations -	127

SECT. II. p. 128.

Notions of practical Christianity generally prevalent	129
They allow to religion only a partial jurisdiction -	130
Mischievous consequences of the above error -	131
The preceding statement confirmed by an appeal to various classes of nominal Christians, particularly of the higher order - - - - -	132
To the idle and dissipated - - - - -	134

To the votaries of sensual pleasure	- - -	135
To the votaries of pomp and parade	- - -	136
To the votaries of wealth and ambition	- - -	137
To other classes	- - - - -	139
Conclusion from the preceding review, and general fault in principle of all the above classes, that of transferring the heart from God to some other master	- -	140
Effects of the fundamental error above mentioned, on our judgments and practice in the case of others	-	142
Farther effects, Religion degraded into a set of statutes, and quibbled away accordingly	- - - -	144
Another effect—Religion placed in external actions, rather than habits of mind	- - - - -	148
Yet the internal principle all in all	- - -	ibid.
As an evil resulting from the last-mentioned error, Christian dispositions are not cultivated	- - - -	149
Instances of the preceding position; the generality forget that the Christian's life is a life of faith, and the true Christian's character in this respect	- - -	150
Another distinction between nominal and real Christians, grounded on their different tastes and relish for religious subjects	- - - - -	152
Proof drawn from the different manner of their employing the Sunday, and hints on that head	- - -	154
Other internal defects; particularly in meekness and humility	- - - - -	159
SECT. III.— On the Desire of human Estimation and Applause
— The generally prevailing Opinions contrasted with those of the true Christian - - 160
Universality of the desire of human estimation	-	ibid.
Common eulogium of this passion, both as to its nature and effects	- - - - -	161
The above vindication questioned, even by the Pagan moralists	- - - - -	164
Essentially defective and vicious nature of this passion, stated and explained in Scripture	- - -	165

The world's commendations naturally misplaced	-	167
Yet Christians taught in Scripture to cultivate with moderation the good opinion of the world, as an instrument of usefulness	- - - - -	169
But points out a higher object of our ambition	-	170
The inordinate love of human estimation generally prevalent, and the natural result	- - - - -	171
Proofs from various considerations; from the House of Commons	- - - - -	172, 173
From duelling	- - - - -	173
Duelling, wherein its essential guilt consists	- -	174
A peculiarity in respect of this vice	- - -	175
Commonly supposed value of the inordinate love of human estimation, questioned and disproved	- - -	176
Reasonings of Christian moralists on this head often bear few traces of Christian morality	- - - -	177
Conduct of the true Christian, in what regards the love of human estimation	- - - - -	178
The most effectual method of moderating this love	-	179
The true Christian guards against it on small no less than on great occasions; in religion, no less than elsewhere,		186
Parting counsel to those who wish to bring this passion under due regulation; particularly to cultivate love and humility	- - - - -	189

SECT. IV.—The generally prevailing Error, of substituting amiable Tempers and useful Lives in the place of Religion, stated and confuted; with Hints to real Christians - - - - 193

Amiable tempers and useful lives, their merit commonly exaggerated	- - - - -	194
Stated to be the sum of religion in substance, if not in name	- - - - -	ibid.
The distinction between morality and religion, fatal		195
The worth of amiable tempers, as estimated by the standard of unassisted reason, commonly overrated	- -	196
Many false pretenders to them	- - - -	ibid.

Essentially defective nature of amiable tempers, when not grounded in religion - - - -	196
Their precarious and short duration - - - -	197
Worth of useful lives, when estimated by the standard of unassisted reason, overrated - - - -	200
The particular good of them more than countervailed by the general evil - - - - -	201
Worth of amiable tempers and useful lives, when not grounded in religion, proved to be greatly overrated, if estimated on Christian principles - - - - -	ibid.
Their nature essentially corrupt - - - -	204
The true Christian really the most amiable and useful character - - - - -	206
Admonitions to true Christians in the above respects,	207
To the naturally sweet-tempered and active - -	208
To the naturally austere and rough - - -	209
Amiable tempers and useful lives, their just praise -	213
Apt to be deceived by them in our own case - -	214
Danger to true Christians from mixing too much in worldly business - - - - -	215
Advice to those who suspect this to be their case -	216
Exquisite sensibility, its flimsy texture; school of Rousseau and Sterne. - - - - -	220
Sterne reprobated for indecency (note) - - -	222

SECT. V.—Some other grand Defects in the practical System of the Bulk of Nominal Christians - 223

Inadequate conceptions generally prevalent of the guilt and evil of sin - - - - -	ibid.
Proofs from our common language - -	224, 225
Different standard in the word of God - - -	226
Inadequate fear of God generally prevalent - -	227
Sin, its baneful nature - - - - -	ibid.
The future punishments of the wicked represented in Scripture as resulting from established relations -	228

And of the necessity of acquiring a peculiar character, in order to fit us for it - - - - -	232
True Christian's efforts in this great work - -	234
The Christian's life, represented under the character of a journey through a strange country - - -	ibid.
The bulk of nominal Christians defective in the love of God - - - - -	237
Practical excellence of this quality - - -	238
The Stage tried by this test - - - - -	239
Our referring the Stage to this test, justified by political analogy - - - - -	241
Bulk of nominal Christians defective in love of their fellow-creatures - - - - -	242
True marks of love of our neighbour - - -	244
The Stage tried by reference to this test - - -	247

SECT. VI.—Grand Defect.—Neglect of the peculiar Doctrines of Christianity - - - - - 249

Grand defect in the practical system of nominal Christians, their neglect of the peculiar doctrines of Christianity; and practical evils resulting therefrom, in the case of persons desirous of repentance and reformation - - -	ibid.
Advice of modern religionists to persons of this description - - - - -	252
Advice given to them by the Holy Scriptures, and by the Church of England - - - - -	253
Extreme importance of this point; nature of true holiness, and Christian method of obtaining it - - -	254
Practical use made by the true Christian of the peculiar doctrines of Christianity - - - - -	256
The same use of them made in the Scriptures - - -	257
Use of the peculiar doctrines of Christianity, in enforcing its importance - - - - -	258
In enforcing an unconditional surrender of ourselves to God - - - - -	ibid.

In enforcing the guilt of sin, and the dread of its punishment	- - - - -	259
In promoting the love of God	- - - - -	260
In promoting the love of Christ	- - - - -	261
In promoting the love of our fellow-creatures	- - - - -	ibid.
In promoting humility and meekness	- - - - -	263
In promoting a spirit of moderation in earthly pursuits, and cheerfulness in suffering	- - - - -	264
In promoting courage, confidence in danger, and heavenly-mindedness	- - - - -	266
Grand distinction between nominal and real Christians; the place practically assigned by them to the peculiar doctrines of Christianity	- - - - -	269

CHAP. V. p. 271.

On the excellence of Christianity in certain important Particulars. Argument which results thence in proof of its Divine Origin.

Consistency between the leading doctrines, and practical precepts, of Christianity	- - - - -	271
Between the leading doctrines of Christianity, among each other	- - - - -	272
Between the practical precepts of Christianity, among each other	- - - - -	ibid.
Higher value set by Christianity, on moral, than on intellectual attainments	- - - - -	276
Intrinsic excellence of the practical precepts of Christianity	- - - - -	279
Strong evidence of the truth of Christianity, afforded by the number and variety of the kinds of evidence by which its divine origin is proved	- - - - -	280

CHAP. VI. p. 282.

Brief Inquiry into the present State of Christianity in this Country, with some of the Causes which have led to its critical Circumstances. Its Importance to us as a political Community, and practical Hints for which the foregoing Considerations give occasion.

Tendency of Religion, and especially of Christianity, to promote the well-being of political communities -	282
A general standard or tone of moral practice, in every community - - - - -	283
Christianity has raised this general standard or tone -	284
Effects on religion, of adversity and prosperity respectively - - - - -	286
Natural presumption concerning the present state of Religion among us, afforded by the preceding consideration	ibid.
Causes from which the peculiarities of Christianity slide into disuse - - - - -	289
Still farther decline to be expected - - - - -	290
The above presumptive statements justified by facts -	291
One cause assigned, which has principally operated in reducing Christianity among us to a mere system of ethics. - - - - -	293
Christianity, such as it is, stated in the present work, the religion of the pillars of our church - - -	ibid.
Its corruption accelerated by the civil commotions of the last century - - - - -	295
The peculiar doctrines of Christianity, at length almost left out of the system: this position confirmed by an appeal to our best novels - - - - -	296
The Literati of our days, sceptically disposed -	299
Consequences to be expected - - - - -	300
The objection, that the Author's system so strict, that if it were to prevail the world could not go on, stated and refuted - - - - -	301-304

Happy effects to us as a political community, from the prevalence of vital Christianity - - - -	304
The position, that Christianity is hostile to patriotism, opposed - - - - -	306
Superior nature and extent of true Christian benevolence,	307
Christianity peculiarly adapted to promote the well-being of political communities, from its hostility to selfishness - - - - -	309
Political expedients for preventing the mischievous effects of selfishness on civil communities, and superior efficacy of Christianity in this respect - - -	310-314
Means by which Christianity produces the above effect,	312
Vital Christianity can alone produce them - -	314
In the present circumstances of this country, we must either have vital Christianity, or we shall have none at all,	315-317
Appeal to experience, in confirmation of the above position - - - - -	317
Political good effects from the revival of vital Christianity among us, and bad ones from its farther decline -	318
A state of great civilization, no security against great moral corruption - - - - -	320
Practical hints for the conduct of men in power, suggested by the above statements - - - - -	322
No time for half measures—A decided line of conduct called for - - - - -	ibid.
Duty enforced on us, of checking open profaneness, and, above all, of giving religious instruction to the rising generation - - - - -	324
Evangelical Christianity alone likely to produce any real amendment - - - - -	325
The above remark pressed on the bishops, the clergy, and our universities - - - - -	326
Apology for having treated of Religion so much with a view to its political effects - - - - -	326, 327

CHAP. VII. p. 328.

Practical Hints to various Descriptions of Persons.

The common sort of Christianity does not deserve the name	- - - - -	328
Some considerations preparatory to self-examination; one of them peculiarly awful	- - - - -	329
Causes of self-deception, suggested	- - -	330
One cause of self-deception, the mistaking our merely out-growing or changing our vices, for forsaking all sin; appeal to life	- - - - -	331
Charge of being uncharitable repelled, and what really charity and uncharitableness	- - - - -	334
Women naturally more disposed to Religion than men; domestic advantages therefrom	- - - - -	336
Innocent young people, the term how much abused	-	338
The reformation held sufficient by the world, how much it falls short of true Christian regeneration	- -	339
Practical hints to such as having hitherto been careless and irreligious, wish to become true Christians	- -	342
Excellent nature and practical benefits of humility	-	345
Love enforced	- - - - -	348
Base and mercenary nature of the Religion of the bulk of nominal Christians, and opposite character of true Christianity	- - - - -	ibid.
The charge repelled, that we render Christianity a gloomy service	- - - - -	351
Multiplied sources of pleasure to true Christians	-	352
Superior situation of true Christians over men of the world, in point of comfort, especially in our days	- -	355
SECT. II.— Advice to some who profess their full Assent to the fundamental Doctrines of the Gospel - 357
A loose way of holding the true doctrines of Christianity, too generally prevalent in our relaxed days	-	358
Its danger and mischievous effects	- - -	360
Watchfulness and diligence enforced; and the study of the lives of eminent Christians recommended	- -	361
